Directions: There are four passages in this part. Each passage is followed by five questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. Choose the best one and mark your answer on the ANSWER SHEET with a single bar through the center of the letter.

Passage One

Why humans became almost entirely hairless? There are some obvious reasons. For instance, having hair on our palms and wrists would make using stone tools rather difficult. The reasons the rest of our body lost its fur, however, are still up for debate.

A widely accepted theory is that, when human ancestors moved from the cool shaded forests into hot grasslands, they needed better control of their temperature. Losing all that fur made it possible to hunt during the day without overheating.

These are not the only possibilities, and perhaps the loss of hair is due to a combination of factors. Mark Pagel, a scientist at the University of Reading, has also proposed that going furless reduces places for lice(虱子) and others to hide.

An interesting theory is that humans lost hair on their faces to help with emotional communication. Mark Changizi is a scientist who studies vision and color theory. Changizi says the reason for losing hair is in our eyes. While many animals have two types of cones, or the receptors in the eye that detect color, humans have three.

Changizi proposes the third cone allows us to communicate nonverbally. Humans observe color changes in the face. For instance, a baby whose skin looks a little green or blue can indicate illness. A pink blush (红晕) in humans might indicate attraction. A face turning red could indicate anger, even in people with darker skin tones. The only way to see these emotional states is without fur on our faces.

It's unlikely one study will conclude the exact reason humans lost so much fur. However, combining the new evidence will get us closer to the truth.

Passage Two

Have you recently spotted people carrying trash bags while jogging? Or their hands filled with old plastic bottles? You might soon.

Sweden's latest fitness craze (狂热) --plogging--is making its way here. The term combines the word "jogging" and the Swedish "plocka upp", meaning pick up. In this case, litter.

Across Europe, there are plogging groups in Denmark, Germany and beyond. In the United States, it's just starting to catch on among exercisers who are fed up with rubbish along their route.

"I'm not going to just let litter sit there. I'm not going to just walk past that plastic bottle," said Emily Wright. "It's not that I don't think it's gross to pick it up. I do. But I also think it's gross for a person to not take responsibility for it."

Wright, 40, has been plogging for several months along the Alexandria waterfront. But just a few weeks ago she learned that what she's been doing has a name. Her partner used to lovingly tease her about her habit of going out for a run-walk for about an hour with a trash bag and plastic gloves. "He used to call it my trash runs," said Wright. "A few weeks ago, he said, 'the Swedes have a name for your trash runs!'"

Laura Lindberg, who lives in Hoboken, New Jersey, said a few weeks ago she learned about plogging and had what she called an "aha moment".

"It was a no-brainer. I knew I could incorporate it into my runs," said Lindberg, 36, who runs four or five days a week. "I suddenly felt guilty for not doing it for all these years I've been running. All you need is a bag."

16. The term "plogging" officially began in_____.

- B. Germany
- C. the U.S.
- D. Denmark

17. How does Wright respond to plogging?

- A. She takes part in it because it is interesting
- B. She hates it even though it is really fun
- C. She enjoys it although it is a bit unpleasant.
- D. She avoids it since it is somewhat gross

18. It can be learned that Wrights plogging _____.

- A. was encouraged by her partner
- B. was motivated by the Europeans
- C. seemed different from that of others
- D. started before she heard about the term

19. By calling it "no-brainer. Lindberg considers plogging _____.

- A. worth doing
- B. easy to do
- C. really inspiring
- D. highly efficient

20. The passage is intended to introduce _____.

- A. the growing popularity of plogging
- B. the brief history of plogging
- C. the mixed public response to plogging
- D. the true meaning of the term "plogging"

Passage Three

China has entered the cinematic space race. Wandering Earth, the country's first blockbuster sci-fi (科幻) film, is on track to be one of the highest-grossing films in China's history.

Set in the distant future, the governments of Earth, confronted with destruction from an unstable sun, have strapped thrusters (推进器) onto the planet, ejecting it out into the universe in search of a new home. But as the Earth approaches Jupiter (木星), a malfunction in the system puts it on course to crash into the planet.

The film is seen by some as the dawn of Chinese sci-fi--a genre that has long been dominated by Hollywood. Several other Chinese-made sci-fi films are due this year, including Shanghai Fortress, about an alien invasion, and Pathfinder, which follows a spaceship that has crashed on a deserted planet.

China is already home to a thriving science fiction literary scene. Wandering Earth is based on the work of Liu Cixin, the author of the Three-Body Problem series and the first Chinese author to win a Hugo award.

China's film market is expected to overtake the US as the world's largest by 2022, but Chinese studios have not invested in sci-fi films. According to Liu, the author of the novel Wandering Earth, the main difference between Chinese and US audiences is trust".

“Building trust between producers, investors and the audience is the biggest challenge here”, he told the state broadcaster CCTV. “Not so many people have faith in a Chinese sci-fi movie,” he said.

Indeed, Wandering Earth was slow to get off the ground in the first few days of its release, with many doubtful of a Chinese-made sci-fi film. As Wandering Earth received positive reviews for its special effects, pacing and arresting views of the Earth as seen from space, it quickly gained popularity.

For Chinese moviegoers, accustomed to sci-fi films made by US studios, Chinese elements such as references to Spring Festival, or Chinese New Year, mahjong and road signs common in China (anquan diyitiao, “safety number one”) were a welcome change.

21. It can be learned from Paragraph I that the film Wandering Earth _____.

- A. is intended to mark China’s progress in space
- B. will be popular with viewers home and abroad
- C. is the first sci-fi film made in China
- D. will bring huge benefits to its producer

22. Which of the following statements is true of the plot of Wandering Earth?

- A. The governments of different countries are not united in their efforts.
- B. Human beings are pushing the Earth to a faraway place in the universe.
- C. Some people are trying to escape from the Earth in a spaceship
- D. The attraction of Jupiter moves the Earth out of the solar system

23. The market of sci-fi films has been dominated by

- A. Hollywood
- B. the UK
- C. Bollywood
- D. China

24. Chinese studios have not invested in sci-fi films mainly because _____.

- A. producers in China are not interested in sci-fi films
- B. the Chinese audience do not like sci-fi films
- C. few people believe that China can make a good sci-fi film
- D. Chinese studios cannot acquire enough funding from producers

25. Which of the following Chinese elements is NOT mentioned in the passage?

- A. Chinese New Year.
- B. Lanterns
- C. Road signs.
- D. Mahjong

Passage Four

We've all been thinking about how to help Texas after Hurricane Harvey. But after watching the way the people of that state have responded to this tragedy, I think Texas might save the rest of us.

Videos from Texas show scenes of rescue and kindness. They are a reminder that America has compassion (同情心)---the kind that doesn't discriminate. You heard it in the gentle way that rescuers spoke to the people they were helping off roofs. Those responders must have been tired and scared too, but they didn't rush--they treated every person and even pets as precious.

More importantly, everyone's connected, those onscreen and those watching from afar. We are feeling like one tribe whose members will set out in the dark through waters to save a stranger. Without a crisis, however, it's too easy to slip back into our separate corners, to see people from another state or ethnicity as a threat.

But don't lose hope. Empathy (共情) is hardwired into our species, according to Dr. James Doty, who studies the brain from inside and out. When we take care of one another, the brain's pleasure centers light up, he explains. "Helping others is not only a benefit to others, it also benefits us in terms of our health and long life, Doty says.

When you want to be reminded of our better angels, rewatch some storm videos. Over and over, you hear people being reassured as they are supported in the arms of rangers. "We've got you...I've got you... You're okay, "they say. It's a message all of us need to hear--and deliver--more often.

26. What does the author try to emphasize in Paragraph 2 about the responders?

- A. They were also ordinary people.
- B. They loved the pets dearly.
- C. They treated everyone equally.
- D. They were highly professional.

27. According to the author, without a crisis, people tend to _____.

- A. behave politely
- B. enjoy a peaceful life
- C. come into conflict.
- D. mistrust each other

28. By "Empathy is hardwired into our species"(Para. 4), the author refers to the idea that _____.

- the values of helping others are underestimated
- offering a helping hand to others is not that easy
- helping others leads to positive physical reactions
- people have no choice but to help each other out

29. What does the author call on in the last paragraph?

- Supporting each other in our daily life.
- Keeping faith in what we can do together.
- Fighting together in times of crisis.
- Remembering those who have helped us

30. The author thinks that Texas might save the rest of Americans by

- making national cooperation possible
- restoring confidence in the government
- setting a good model of compassion
- developing new disaster rescue techniques

Part IV Translation (15 points)

Directions: Translate the following passage into Chinese and put your translation on the ANSWER SHEET.

Up to now we have experienced inequality in areas such as finances and opportunity. Neural (神经的) inequality could be next. This would mean that some people would be able to enhance their thinking with a chip put in the brain, making themselves disproportionately smarter than the average. There could also be the risk of thought control. With scientists getting better at accessing brains and altering thinking, we are reaching a world where scientists could also change our mind. It's a scary idea that someone could "write"" into our mind, create thoughts and ideas in our own brain. We won't be able to distinguish them from ones that we generated ourselves. Would there even be any difference?

Part V Writing (15 points)

Directions: You are to write in no less than 100 words on the topic of "We should (not) listen to the advice of our parents as grown-ups".
